Easy Swaps

uBlocklist, plus Laylavish's huge AI blocklist: github.com/Laylavish/uBlockOrigins-HUGE-AI-Blocklist uBlock Origin (Adblocker), or AdGuard if you use a Chrome-based browser IG Plus (hides Instagram reels, ads, and explore page on desktop, so all you see are messages and posts by friends). There are similar extensions for Facebook, Reddit, and other social media.

DuckDuckGo No AI Search (Make sure to set the "No AI" version as the default browser instead of the regular version)
Enhancer for Youtube (blocks ads, promotions, autoplay, shorts, or any other annoying feature you can think of)

Browser Extensions

This is a guide for people who hate what the internet has become and want to do basic things without being bombarded by AI slop, ads, trackers, or videos. Obviously I don't have time to list every single tech alternative, but these are some that I've tested and are easy to use even for people who aren't super tech-savvy.

I'm not endorsing any company listed here (no ethical consumption, yada yada), just providing some alternatives that are less evil and less annoying than the Big Shitty options.

Browsers (Instead of Chrome):
Vivaldi (EU-based, explicitly anti-AI)
Waterfox (US-based, privacy-focused)
Orion (only mobile browser that allows extensions (i.e. adblockers) on iPhone).

Search Engines (Instead of Google):
DuckDuckGo No AI (US-based, make sure No-AI extension is installed and selected)
Startpage (EU-based, no AI at all)

Surfin' the Net

First of all,

DON'T USE AI!

You didn't need it a few years ago, you don't need it now, and it's literally the worst in so many ways.
